Born and bred South Londoner, Samantha Foley, has a love for art and London, and over 15 years design experience. She created her business Scene in London to celebrate the local neighbourhoods, each one distinct with their own personality and their own proud community.

Community is at the core of the business, working hand-in-hand with our mission is to help people feel connected to the place they live. Whether it's championing key neighbourhood gems through location cards and prints, delivering creative workshops to help bring communities together at local venues, or showcasing her work at public markets, Samantha's work is designed to celebrate and support individual spaces all around the capital.

Alongside a growing collection of London art prints, Samantha also creates bespoke commissions if you're looking for something in particular.

Samantha has worked with many prestigious galleries and museums including The Royal Academy of Arts, The London Transport Museum, The British Museum, Dulwich Picture Gallery, Fashion and Textile Museum, Towner Gallery. Samantha has delivered projects for cultural and creative spaces including London Design Festival, The Affordable Art Fair, Stanley Arts, Canon's House and The Department Store and produced work for Wandsworth Council and Croydon Council.
